Jordanian King, Al-Qasabi highlight Crown Prince’s remarkable role in elevating status of Saudi women

RIYADH — Saudi Arabia’s Ambassador to the United States Princess Reema Bin Bandar and Minister of Commerce Dr. Majed Al-Qasabi highlighted the remarkable role of Crown Prince Mohammed Bin Salman in elevating the status and prestige of Saudi women within a short span of time.

They noted that the decision to allow women to drive and give them more participation in commercial activities are the two major areas that were handled effectively by the Crown Prince in this regard.

Attending a program on MBC television channel, Princess Reema said that Saudi Arabia has made giant strides with regard to participation of women in trade, and marking laws related to women’s empowerment in the Kingdom.

She pointed out that Crown Prince Mohammed Bin Salman had asked about the actual reasons for the low status of Saudi Arabia in the World Bank report, despite the efforts made for increasing women’s participation in the different areas.

The Crown Prince explained to them that the efforts to empower women had not to be made for the sake of the World Bank, but rather to further improve the standard of living of Saudi women."
